GLOBAL GATEWAY

The most spectacular money-no-object experiences in Dubai

Kieron Monks • Updated 6th August 2019

Editor's Note —

(CNN) — Holidaymakers tend to arrive at their destination in search of bargains. A discount on accommodation here, a modestly priced restaurant there to keep costs under control.

Dubai also attracts visitors with a different approach and little interest in price tags - unless the bill is large enough to constitute an attraction in itself.

The Emirate is a well-established playground of the rich and famous, with celebrities, CEOs, and royal family members pitching up on its shores via helicopters, yachts and supercars.

Dubai has developed a broad range of high-end attractions to cater for expensive tastes. We take a look at some of the VIP experiences on offer.

The man-made World archipelago, Dubai

CNN

You won't have to worry about the neighbors telling you to turn the music down if they are not sharing the same land mass. As progress continues on Dubai's ambitious artificial archipelago "The World," private islands are hitting the market. One 11.6-acre offering is available for a bargain $16 million, and many more "countries" are due to become available in the coming years.
