“I said, ‘I love you too’ and I made sure that she was safe inside. We were both so tired from the day at the hospital. I didn’t feel like she was in eminent danger because there was no evacuation order at that point. THE

“Sometimes her kisses were too wet that you have a wipe-off a little bit. That’s who she was. Just loving. We kissed, said goodbye and I drove back to my home. That was the last thing we said to one another.”

After her movie career, Mrs Curry appeared in community theatre productions.

She also devoted her time as a home healthcare nurse for the elderly until she retired.

Mrs Curry lived in her cottage for over 20 years and loved having independence.

Ms Kelley said loved ones are struggling with moving on without their matriarch and are raising funds for her funeral.
