

US tourism hit with UK, Germany travel warnings

Friday, 21 Mar, 2025

A growing number of European nations are warning their citizens they could be denied entry or even detained despite having valid travel documents.

The UK and Germany have updated their travel advisories.

Citizens from both countries have recently been detained and then sent home.

A Welsh tourist is back in the UK and says she was detained for 19 days and led to her deportation flight in 'leg chains and handcuffs.'

US Immigration authorities claim she 'violated the terms and conditions of her admission.'

Three Germans have been detained in recent weeks, including two with US permanent resident status.

One of these, Fabian Schmidt, says he was 'violently interrogated.'

Also, Finland and Denmark have updated their travel advisories warning transgender travelers to contact the American embassy first, especially those that have changed their gender or have the gender designation X in their passport.

It comes as Canadians are foregoing US vacations and staying at home or taking trips to Mexico.

This is predominantly due to the current trade war between the countries.

Related News Stories: Japan inbound tourism hits new record high JetBlue hit with fine for 'chronic flight delays' New travel job vacancies hit 12-month high Hillsborough County Tourism Hits Billion-Dollar Threshold for Third ... Dozens sick as norovirus hits another HAL cruise United fight hits coyote during takeoff Unexpected wave rocks cruise ship Cunard ship hit by back-to-back illness outbreaks Cruise ships flee tropical cyclone as Brisbane braces for direct hit News Archive - Page 3646 of 9418 - TravelMole

